Description of Award
Awards will be given for a maximum of four years for doctoral degree-seeking students, and two years for master’s degree-seeking students. The award will have a non-duty stipend of $5,000 for each the Fall and Spring semesters, no summer funding will be provided. The Graduate School will also provide a twelve credit hour tuition waiver for each the Fall and Spring semesters along with the annual health insurance subsidy. The award may supplement an award by the academic unit or other entity.

Eligibility
• Students applying for funding must successfully complete the Graduate Feeder Scholars Program (GFSP) at Florida A&M University, or be in good standing with the GFSP during their last semester at Florida A&M University; and
• Students must meet minimum standards for admission; and
• Students must be accepted as full-time masters or doctoral students by an academic program by March 1, 2011. No special, part-time, or provisional students will be accepted; and
• Students must be U.S. citizens and qualify for need-based funding as determined by the federal government and the Florida State University Office of Financial Aid and for the amount provided by the award.

Application Instructions
The completed FAMU Feeder Fellowship Application must be submitted to The Graduate School. The applicant is responsible for providing four typewritten copies of the complete application packet no later than March 1, 2011 at 5pm. One of the copies should contain an original signature. Incomplete or late application packets will not be accepted.

Please submit the application packet to the following address:
